THE MYSTERY CLEARED UP IN THE GORDON-BROWN TRAGEDY.

Gordon Knew of the Meeting—Intercepted Letters—His Story of the Struggle—Brown's Desperate Fight Wounded and Killed.

The mystery surrounding the Gordon-Brown tragedy in Louisville was cleared away by developments subsequent to our last report. Gordon discovered the infidelity of his wife through letters addressed to his colored servant girl which he gave to Mrs. Gordon for the girl. According to Gordon he never suspected his wife until a little over a week before. For some time letters had been coming to his office, in the Columbia building, addressed to "Miss Parolee Mitchell, care of Merchants' Advice, Columbia Building, Louisville, Ky."

His wife inquired so particularly about these letters when they failed to come regularly that his suspicions were aroused and he opened one of them. He then had his wife watched and knew when she sent the telegram to Brown. A friend helped him in the matter.

When Arch Brown met Mrs. Gordon on Fourth avenue last Tuesday, Gordon's friend saw them. He followed them to West and Madison, and went to Tenth and Green, where he telephoned to either Gordon's office or to another point where the latter had agreed to wait. The import of the message was that the guilty pair had been traced.

Gordon met his friend at Tenth and Green and the two went to West and Madison, where the house, to which the woman and Brown had gone, was pointed out. Before Gordon left his friend to enter the house he promised that he would do nothing rash and it is said insisted that he was wholly unarmed. The only reason he wanted to go into the place, he said, was to verify his suspicions and show his wife that he was cognizant of her unfaithfulness.

Gordon, who is still on the verge of insanity, was able to tell his story by degrees last week. He said his ideas were to wait below and confront his wife with his knowledge of her guilt and asked the boy how long he supposed the couple would have the upstairs room. He said they generally staid all day. He then started to think it over and heard them talking and later walk across the floor. He said they were in bed was. He thought he heard his wife call her companion "Bob."

He didn't know what to do, and decided to write a note to the man, telling him that he might induce him to come down. He then began the note which was found in the hall, as follows: "Dear Bob: I want to see you." But he was so unstrung that he could not finish it.

Gordon then became desperate and went upstairs and knocked on the door. Brown opened the door, and he forced himself in and the struggle began. He claimed that Brown, during the struggle, got his pistol from an open satchel and fired two of the shots. He is hardly true. Gordon must have fired during the killing, it seems plain that Gordon fired the first shot, and that Brown never had a chance to reach his pistol. After firing, Brown emptied his revolver, he secured Brown's pistol, which was in an open valise, and fired four more bullets into his body, saving one shot for his wife. The papers have had a good deal to say about whether Brown showed any courage and whether Gordon was the first to fire.

The conditions of the room showed conclusively that Brown had fought desperately for his life and that Gordon, on equal desperation gave him no show. It was not a desperate two men equally matched. It was a death struggle between the enraged husband on one side and his wife's paramour on the other, and it was no time for fair play or giving equal chances.

This view of the case is borne out by the fact that eight wounds were found on Brown's body. The ball through the door was the one that went through his ear, as the direction shows it went from the bed, where he was lying, to the door. The other two shots were fired at Mrs. Gordon. One hit her and the other missed her as she ran down the steps mortally wounded. There were ten shots and Brown could not have fired any of them, as his eight wounds showed.

Gordon's trial was set for to-day, but he may not be able to stand trial, as he is in bad shape mentally and physically.

Parlor Fight With A Maniac.

Wm. H. Brown, an inmate of the Western asylum, cut his throat and also stabbed an attendant named Thomasson Saturday night. Brown went into P. H. Johnson's room, a trusty patient, and took the knife out of his pants pocket, about 10 o'clock at night, Johnson having retired. The room was very dark, and with the knife he would rush at everyone that would put in an appearance. Thomasson seized him and received an ugly cut in the abdomen. He knocked off everything brought to bear upon him, by Drs. Stone and Smith, cutting at them all the time and cutting at his own throat at every opportunity until he had gashed it in a horrible manner, and severed the jugular vein, which caused instant death. Coroner Allensworth held an inquest Sunday and the jury brought in a verdict of suicide as the result of an unavoidable accident. Brown's home was at Cullen, Union county, and he was admitted at one o'clock the same day. He was a man of giant size, stout and muscular and fought like a demon.

Drs. Stone and Smith, who went to the help of Thomasson, had close calls as Brown narrowly missed cutting them several times. They got hold of him but he was so bloody they could not hold him. Thomasson is not fatally hurt.

Freight Conductor Killed.

Capt. Ed. Link, one of the most popular conductors in the service of the L. & N., was run over and killed by a train last Thursday night. The accident happened at Guthrie. About half past ten, Capt. Link was making a coupling when his foot slipped and before he could extricate himself the wheels struck him. The engineer was signaled by a brakeman for a quick stop, but it was too late to save the unfortunate man. His body was cut in two. When first reached by the people who witnessed the accident, the conductor was alive. He was taken to the Grant hotel and died about half an hour later. He was about 30 years old, a married man, and a brother of W. T. Link, proprietor of the well-known Link's bar at Nashville.

An Expensive Discharge.

Last Friday, Dave Broadie, colored, was tried before Esq. T. M. Barker, at Bell, on a charge of carrying a concealed weapon and disturbing religious worship. He was fined $25 on the first charge and $20 on the second. Broadie furnished the necessary bond, repaying the debt for six months, and was released from custody. Mr. J. B. Allensworth, of this city, represented the commonwealth in the case.

Howell News.

HOWELL, May 4.—[The election on the prohibition question in this precinct, passed off very quietly to-day resulting in an overwhelming victory for the dries, the vote standing 108 to 57 wet. The election will prevent the sale of whiskey here for three years longer and our people feel highly elated over the result of to-day's election.]

A Narrow Escape.

CHARTERS, May 5.—David E. Bowles was coming to Crofton this morning in his buggy, his horse run away and made heading wood of his buggy. Bowles was dragged some twenty or thirty steps and bruised considerably, but not seriously hurt and is able to walk around. The horse got scared at the buggy top.

They Went Dry.

The vote on the liquor question taken in Lafayette magisterial district Saturday resulted in a victory for the "drys." At Lafayette the majority against liquor was 58, while Howell gave a two-thirds vote 108 to 57. There are only two licenses in effect in the district and they will expire during the year.

Police Court News.

Hot and Close Election for School Trustees—One Change in the Board.

The election of school trustees for the white public schools of Hopkinsville Saturday was the most spirited contest of the kind ever seen in the city. A determined effort was made to defeat the re-election of Messrs. J. D. Russell and R. H. De Treville and the attempt was successful in part. The opposition ticket had upon it the names of Messrs. J. B. Galbreath and W. H. Faxon, and the contest was opened with the announcement by the workers that the issue was to be a change in the management of the schools. This brought out a number of active workers who had grievances against Prof. Dietrich, the superintendent, and it likewise brought into activity many friends of the school who were opposed to any effort to interfere with its present management or to embarrass Prof. Dietrich in his work with an unfriendly board of trustees. The ticket once forged to the front on this issue, which it turned out was being used without the knowledge of Mr. Galbreath. As soon as he heard of it he declared that he was not running to antagonize Prof. Dietrich, that he was warmly in favor of the superintendent, and that he was coming to the election and declared that he was making the race upon his own merits at the request of friends. Mr. Russell also conducted his own canvass and by noon Russell and Galbreath were about 40 votes ahead and the race was moving along quietly and the voting appeared to be about over, about 250 votes having been cast. But about 2 o'clock a full force of workers again took the field to overcome Mr. Russell's lead and elect Mr. Faxon, Mr. Galbreath having by that time run far ahead of all the candidates. This fight was so fiercely waged that about 200 more votes were brought out and Mr. Russell was hard pressed when the polls closed at 4 o'clock. He was re-elected by only seven votes.

There were nearly 500 votes cast, the successful candidates being: Russell 232, Faxon 225, De Treville 181. The two first named were elected. Messrs. Faxon and De Treville did not re-election. The highest vote in any previous election was in 1893 when J. E. McPherson received 234 votes, W. W. Clark 208, Joe McCarroll 207 and Ira L. Smith 175. In 1894 there was no contest and more than 100 votes were cast. Two women, Mrs. Owen, and Mrs. Cooper voted for the new ticket. The election was so peaceful and good humoredly conducted and no bad feeling was engendered so far as we have heard. As it was a "dog fall" for the dries, both sides seemed satisfied. Mr. Galbreath qualified at the regular meeting that night and Mr. Russell was re-elected as president of the board.

DEMPSEY LEADS.

Richardson a Strong Second and the One Behind in the Heat.

The mass conventions of Saturday in twenty-seven counties of the thirty nine in the First railroad commissioner's district have been heard from. Dempsey gets Butler, Henderson, Hopkins, LaRue, Logan, Mublenberg, McLean, Ohio, Union and Webster—76 votes. Richardson gets Daviess, Christian, Barren, Metcalfe, Monroe and Todd—52 votes. Moore gets Caldwell, Crittenden and Hancock—15 votes. Morrow gets McCracken, Carlisle and 49 votes in Graves—194 votes. McElroy gets Simpson and Warren—20 votes. Miller gets Calloway and one half of Graves—144 votes.

Trigg goes unrepresented but will probably be for Moore or Miller. The counties not heard from are Ballard, Breckenridge, Edmonson, Fulton, Grayson, Hardin, Hart, Hickman, Lyon, Livingston, Macon and Marshall. Half of these are in the First district and will go to Moore, Miller or Morrow. The others are likely to go to Dempsey, Richardson or McElroy. Dempsey has Warren after McElroy, 14 votes. Mr. Dempsey has a strong lead but may not be able to save himself from the combinations that are usually made against the leading candidate. Richardson will probably have about 60 or 70 votes and be a strong second to Dempsey. He carried Daviess, receiving 108 votes more than all the other candidates together. In a convention of 300 at Henderson he was beaten only 6 votes, the result standing: 151 to 145.

There are 277 votes and 189 will be needed to nominate. The convention will be held at Owensboro May 15, to-morrow week.

THE CHRISTIAN CONVENTION.

The local convention was organized by the election of M. D. Brown, chairman, and W. R. Howell, secretary. It instructed for Richardson without opposition and was in session but a few minutes. About 50 delegates were appointed to Owensboro.

FAIRHAVEN'S PET DOG.

He Aided the Police in Quelling a Terrible Riot.

There is a dog in Fairhaven, Wash., that by a resolution passed unanimously by the council of that city is exempt from taxation and all other ordinances that apply to ordinary canines so long as he shall live. He is not a handsome animal, and his name is not indicative of good breeding or respectability. They call him Flobo, and he has but one eye. His left hind leg is almost useless also, and his body covered with the scars of many a conflict. In some spots his hair will never grow again, and his outside looks like an old fur garment that has been the home of moths. But his heart is right and he has retained the respect of the entire community ever since the labor strike up in the Puget Sound country three or four years ago.

Nobody knows where he came from, says the Chicago Record. They say he was deflected by the tide of humanity that flowed that way when everything was prosperous. Nor has anyone claimed membership in his pack. There is no dog in all the country that has more friends than he, and his behavior is such as to indicate that he wishes to keep them. During the labor troubles there was a narrow escape from a riot. Several thousand railway laborers of all nationalities, crazed with drink and passion, thronged to loot and burn the town, and they gathered in one of the principal streets to listen to the incendiary tirades of a fellow named to do so. The leader of the mob was a worthless, drunken fellow who had never done an honest day's labor in his life so far as anyone could tell, but a gift of gab, and spent most of his time making speeches to the strikers and stirring them up to mischief.

It was he who promised to lead them in the destruction of the city. The chief of police was a brave fellow, and when one of the patrolmen dared go into the crowd and arrest the agitator he decided to do so himself. He forced his way through a mob of more than three thousand men, and when he reached the agitator by the collar, jerked him off a drygoods box from which he was speaking and said: "Come along with me." A thousand fists were clenched, a thousand revolvers were drawn, a thousand men had stones or bricks or clubs in their hands, and the merry policeman stood alone among them. But he clung to the collar of his prisoner and tried to drag him along. Then came a section of indescribable excitement. A suffian arose before the chief of police and ordered him to release the orator, and when he declined started to attack him. But when a huge dog seemed to spring out of the earth. No one noticed him before, and no one saw where he came from. Providence sent him to disperse that mob and he did it. With a roar like that of a wild beast he sprang at the throat of the ruffian, who interfered with the chief of police, and fastened his fangs in his flesh. There were tremendous outcry and confusion. Everybody in the crowd started to slip the crowd with his prisoner and slip him into a hack, which drove hastily away before they were missed.

The man was finally released from the dog, but not until he was so badly bitten that he had to be taken to the hospital, and with many kicks and cuffs and bruises from clubs and stones the enterprising brute managed to get out of the crowd. But his diversion broke up the mob and drove one of the ringleaders all through the town and plunder, and they did not stop talking about the incident for several days.

It is a good illustration of the peculiarities of human nature that the mob gave the dog more sympathy than they offered to the man, and from that day there was no more trouble. They tried to teach him to drink whiskey and beer, but he always refused, and while he accepted the attention of the "bought" with dignity, he kept his distance and remained with the law-and-order party to the end.

IMME, FELIX FAURE.

The "Mistress of the Empire" is said to be a charming woman. We may say of the wife of the new president of the French republic, "like a fortunate country, she has no history." Mme. Felix Faure, wife of the president of the French republic, is the daughter of a solicitor and niece of Senator (Duke) of Ambray, in the department of Indre-et-Loire. On July 10, 1863, at the age of twenty-three years, she became Mme. Felix Faure. She was a beautiful brunette, with jet black hair and sparkling eyes.

Children's laughter have blessed his union, and Antoinette, the younger, is the favorite. She is a charming woman, and her husband is a charming man. The Simple Domestic Life of the German Chancellor. Feeding Crows to Hungry Birds is an Entertaining Part of His Daily Routine. His Estate is a Model of a Noble's Life.

In some inscrutable way, though, it has become known that a certain merchant, a perfume in Bond street, London, made use of the first house boat in English waters as long ago as the year 1885. IT'S VERY ENGLISH.

How the Wealthy and Wise Britons Live in Summer. One of the features of life in England is the house boat as a summer residence. Instead of wearing himself out and exhausting his purse by going to a watering place, your wealthy Englishman hires a tugboat to tow his floating home up the Thames, and rests him content, angling for fish that never bite and smoking. The inventor of the house boat is unknown. Eucalyptus are discreetly silent on the subject, and a careful research of long established English journals fails to find any mention of the term previous to 1884. When you go through an Indian camp you only see red men, and stand against the sides of the teepees, carried on the backs of little girls by means of a blanket which is fastened at the top with a broad leather belt, or being rolled to and fro by the wind in the boughs of the cottonwood trees. These are the Indian cradles. Sometimes, if the man is going on a long journey in search of game or for water, or to escape a war party, two of these cradles are taken together by stout straps and swung over the back of a pony, one dangling on each side, like the baskets on a pack mule. But in a rally of horses are for the men and boys to ride, and the ponies are either carried by the girls or packed away on a "prairie," which is a large wagon that carries a

Good Rebeck, Well Applied. That was a good rebeck which an English hawker is credited with giving his sister, who wrote, asking him to look up a governor for her children, enumerating the list of talents and virtues she would require, or a salary of $400 a year. "I'll look out for one, certainly," he wrote in reply, "but if I find one, all that you describe I shall marry her to it."

A decision handed down by the Court of Appeals Saturday declares the Louisville tax ordinance of 1894 unconstitutional, because exempting from ad valorem taxation certain personal property upon which a license had been paid. The Outworn are Bad.

Several farmers were standing together on the street Saturday when a Kentucky representative walked by and casually inquired if there were any cut worms this season.

"Cut worms?" Well I should say so," remarked one of them. They have cleaned up my garden, my cornfield and have now started on my clover. Never saw 'em as bad in my life.

"Yes they are pretty bad this season," said Charlie Knight. I have found as many as two dozen in one hill of corn and under one mullen stalk I pulled up I counted 139 of all ages, sizes and sexes.

At this stage Mr. J. D. Shepherd put in and said: "Mind you, I don't say I saw this, but I heard of it. My neighbors say that he killed up a piece of ground late one evening for cabbage and when he went to plant the cabbage next morning, his hills were gone. They had crawled away."

This reminded John Van Cleave of the experience of one of his neighbors, whose name we failed to catch. He said a piece of corn land was laid off and the next morning the ground appeared perfectly level and smooth. The worms in their eagerness to be time had taken possession of the rows until they were filled up level with the ground.

Mr. Shepherd said the worms in that case might have been mashed by log and used to enrich the soil. It would have saved buying fertilizers.

All of these incidents were related by gentlemen of undoubted veracity. We have seen them cut at Chicago all Grange sales.

OBITUARY.

Died at his home near Bell, Ky., Apr. 29, 1895, Hosea B. Woody, of heart failure. He had been sick only a week with a complication of diseases, but had not seemed dangerous at all. He had proved so much for his frail form. He was born June 6, 1825, was twice married, his first consort being Miss Mary Quisenberry who lived only a short time. No children survived this union. Afterward he married Miss S. C. Radford; four children blessed this union and survive him. His wife long ago preceded him to the "City not made with human hands."

"That death loves a shining mark" has again been verified; as he was in many respects a remarkable man, a man of strong will power, great strength of character, indomitable energy and a successful business man. To say that he will be missed mildly expresses it.

The presence and sorrow of the through bore eloquent testimony of the high esteem in which he was held. The funeral procession was the largest set seen here for many years, being fully three quarters of a mile long.

He will be missed in the little school house prayer meetings weekly held near his home for eight years, being a constant attendant; although he took no active part, his influence, his deep interest showed how much he loved the Lord's work.

He had been an exemplary member of Locust Grove Baptist church for many years and was deacon at the time of his death. He loved his church devotedly, and though a quiet, reserved man, he was a faithful laborer in the Master's Vineyard and just how far his silent, gentle influence went out will perhaps never be known. He knew his work was nearly over and frequently said "I have no preparations to make, it's all right." So without a struggle or frown he passed over into the Beautiful Beyond.

He rests from his labors and his Works do follow him.

The funeral services were conducted by Revs. T. S. McCall and W. H. Vaughan. "If He Die Shall He Live Again" being chosen for the theme text.

The services were impressive and appropriate. One Who LOVED HIM.

Largest Steer in the World.

There arrived at the West Philadelphia stock yards on Friday what is claimed to be the largest steer in the world.

The animal, which weighs within a fraction of two tons, is five years old, and was raised near Mechanicsburg, Cumberland county. It is of the Durham variety. A special car was provided for the transportation of the monster-beef. The animal is so large, fat and clumsy that after lying down it is with great difficulty that it manages to stand up again, and usually requires the assistance of a gang of cattle-men.

The monster is exceedingly docile, and seems to know his place. "Dick," to which it answers when spoken to by its keeper. "Dick" is now on exhibition at the stock yards and will be until Tuesday, when it will cease to be the largest steer alive. On that day "Dick" will be transformed into about a ton and a quarter of dressed beef.

The official records of the abattoir show that "Dick" is the largest beef that has arrived there in thirty years.—Philadelphia Record.

The Lid Still On.

Among stories told by country doctors this one certainly deserves a place. The doctor had prescribed for an Irishman, and visited his cabin the next day to see how he was getting on.

"Well, Patrick, are you better today?" he asked, pleasantly.

"Oh, no further, no—I'm worse, with terrible pain in me innards."

"Why didn't you take the pills I ordered?"

"I did that, an' I'm worse; but maybe the cover hasn't come off the box yet!"—Youth's Companion.

Queer Bible Expounder.

Matthew Henry's commentary on the Bible was written for the common people and in the slang of the day. In commenting on Judges ix, he says:

"We are here told by what acts Abimelech got into the saddle. He hired for his service all the scoundrels and scoundrels of the country. Jotham was really a fine gentleman. The Sackemites were the first to kick him off. They said all the fill they could of him in their table talk. They drank health to his confusion."—N. Y. Journal.

Soda Propelled Engines.

A fireless locomotive engine was recently used on the Aix-la-Chapelle Julich railway. The motor power is derived from soda. The invention is based on the principle that solutions of caustic soda, which have high boiling point, liberate heat while absorbing steam. These engines eject neither smoke nor steam and work noiselessly. Compared with coal-burning locomotives, soda engines show a capacity equal to the former, while they are worked with greater ease and simplicity.

The custom of using blinkers on bedlams of horses, though handed down from generation to generation, is rapidly disappearing.

BASE BALL NOTES.

Hopkinsville is again in the swim. The public will be treated to two games of ball this week with Henderson, a team composed of nice and capable young men. It is useless to say anything concerning our team for the management has collected together out of Louisville and Nashville, a team that do credit to any town or city. Henderson is a strong aggregation of ball tossers and a good game can be expected. Be sure and come with a victorious voice and let's win the first series.

Our team lines up as follows: Ford, catcher; Schmidt and Leason, pitchers; Wornack, 2nd base; Richardson, 2nd base; Thorpe, short stop; Stony Morris, 3d base; Ashford, left field; A. Ward, centre field; Schmidt and Leason, right field. With these superb tossers we can depend on two thirds of the games. This season will be the best season ever witnessed. Shall we have the flag from our neighbors—Clarksville.

Wornack, as we all know, has the championship of all semi-professional first basemen. As a base runner he has few equals. A good batter and coacher also.

Ashford we do not know much about, but he comes highly recommended from Vanderbilt University.

Hord as we all know is a good catcher and with Richardson to help him out, there is little danger in being in need of catchers.

Schmidt and Leason are two good twirlers and have good cures and tremendous speed.

Thorpe is a good and reliable short stop, and a heavy batter. He too comes highly recommended.

Richardson was Clarksville's second baseman last year and is a hard hitter and an all around good player.

With the home boys, S. Morris, A. Ward and J. Morris, we have a good team.

The management hasn't decided who they will pick captain yet, but they will select the best man for the position.

The games this week will be played Thursday and Friday, and will be called at 3 p. m. sharp. It is safe to say that large crowds will witness both games.

The games of ball played last Thursday and Friday between the Auburn team and the local team resulted in a draw. On Thursday our home team won by a score of 17 to 15, and Friday the Auburn boys were victorious, the score being 18 to 14. The games were not well attended as they should have been, as there was some very good playing on both sides. The visiting team left for their home after the game Friday.

Free Medical Aid.

M. Felix Faure has decided that all the state and other domestics at the Ellysee and their families are to receive medical assistance gratis, says the London Daily News. The cost is to be paid out of his own purse. All the napers and other servants employed there by the state have been nearly thirty years at the Ellysee. They have been kept on longer than they might have been, because it would be so difficult to find men so fit for their places. They cannot be dismissed before a certain number of years' service has given them a right to a pension. Since influenza visited Paris, in 1893, they have often suffered from this illness, and, being old, had often to seek medical assistance. As their salaries are not high, they thought this was hard, and so also thinks the president. M. Faure has named Capt. Bouches to look after them and to be their spokesman.

A Shy Author.

Mary E. Wilkins, the story writer, is so shy in general society, that it is the general verdict among the Boston and New York literary circles that no one is acquainted with her. She is so shy that she will not even look at a man when he is talking to her.

Dr. Kollock in Nashville.

The attention of the reader is especially called to the case of Dr. Matthew Henry Kollock, which is in another column. The Doctor is native of Norfolk, Va., (1834) of a prominent Southern family of Savannah, Ga. He is called as a standard authority by the "Encyclopaedia Britannica," page 19, the "Largest and most important work in the world," being in 25 volumes, each the size of a large church Bible. He is noted as the discoverer of the active principle of the famous "numb" specific for neuritis of the face and limbs. The Doctor has been all over the world and has made many cures, especially at "hot springs," given up by other physicians.

Persons who sympathize with the averted will rejoice with the D. E. Carr of 1235 Harrison street, Kansas City. He is native of Nashville, Tenn., a prominent Southern family of Savannah, Ga. He is called as a standard authority by the "Encyclopaedia Britannica," page 19, the "Largest and most important work in the world," being in 25 volumes, each the size of a large church Bible. He is noted as the discoverer of the active principle of the famous "numb" specific for neuritis of the face and limbs. The Doctor has been all over the world and has made many cures, especially at "hot springs," given up by other physicians.

Italy spends every year 14,000,000 lire on her army and navy. Twenty-five lire equal $1.

A lady at Tooleys, La., was very sick with bilious colic when M. C. Foster, a prominent merchant of that town gave her a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says she was well in forty minutes after taking the first dose. For sale by R. C. Hardwick, Hopkinsville, Ed. B. Bogard, Lafayette.

The estimated cost of both sides of the great civil war in this country was $3,500,000,000.

For whooping cough Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is excellent. By using it freely the disease is deprived of all dangerous consequences. There is no danger in giving the remedy to babies, as it contains no injury to them. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by R. C. Hardwick, Hopkinsville, Ed. B. Bogard, Lafayette.

The army of Bolivia cost the people of that impoverished country $1,800,000 a year.

Nearly every one requires a tonic blood medicine in the spring. There is nothing so good as Foley's Sarsaparilla. For sale by R. C. Hardwick.

A Household Necessity. No family should be without Foley's Diarrhoea and Colic Cure. Perfectly safe and will give instant relief. Price 25 and 50c. For sale by R. C. Hardwick.

Austria spends every year 15,000,000 florins on the army. Twelve florins equal $5.

A Warm Friend. Foley's Colic and Diarrhoea Cure is very hot, but when diluted it is a warm friend indeed to those suffering from bowel complaints. It never fails. 25 and 50c. For sale by R. C. Hardwick.

The Spanish army costs 142,000,000 pesetas a year. Twenty-five pesetas equal $1.

When so many people are taking and deriving benefit from Hood's Sarsaparilla, why don't you try it yourself? It is highly recommended.

Everybody will be interested in what is said about Olive Branch in another column. It costs only $1 a month.

It is estimated that the world's arm and navy cost the world's taxpayers a little over $40,000,000.

Important to Invalid Ladies. Dr. Kilmer:—After giving your Olive Branch a thorough trial I can safely say it is the best medicine for Female Complaints. It does just what you claim for it.

Have You Had the Grip? If you have, you probably need a reliable medicine like Foley's Honey and Tar to heal your lungs and stop the rattling cough and sore throat.

Dr. A. P. Campbell has resumed his practice and also secured the right to extract teeth by the painless process of Dr. J. H. Smith.

QUEER-LOOKING SULKY.

Its inventor is of the opinion that it will Acquire the Wonders. A horse-lover in Hartford, Conn., has devised a sulky that may accomplish wonders in the development of speed in trotting horses. It is a rather odd-looking arrangement, as may be seen from the picture printed herewith, but its construction is based upon several very important considerations.

In running against time the horse should have as nearly absolute freedom of wind and limb as possible, being relieved of draught. In other words, he should be as nature designed him, and the inventor of this sulky claims that it more nearly accomplishes that end than any device yet made known. As shown in the cut the driver's seat is over the horse's hip, with the wheels a trifle in advance of the middle of the animal's body. The central upright, extending from the wheel to the seat, on a slight incline, not only assists in helping propel the wheels, thus reducing the draught to the minimum. A sargile supports and steadies the shafts, and keeps them from swinging to the pockets that incline the ends of the shafts keep the sulky from running faster than the horse.

The only necessities in the way of harness are the breastplate, the sargile and the bridle, leaving the utmost freedom to the shoulders and the chest, as well as to the lungs by reason of less lightening of the girth.

If the horse rears or otherwise misbehaves, the sulky must go up with him, and if he makes a sideways movement, he must land the sulky where he lands himself, with no danger of dishing the wheel.

The inventor says that no "training down" of overweighted will be necessary when his vehicle is used, as the heavier the weight, within a reasonable limit, the more easily the sulky will be propelled. He also says that a horse must be more easily controlled from the new location of the seat than when the driver is at the end of a trifle lower than the horse.

One of these sulks is now building, and several horsemen, who have seen the plans, think very favorably of it.

A great ordinance survey map of England, containing over 100,000 sheets and costing during the past twenty years about a million dollars a year, is now completed.
